

Charlie Chin, historian, story-teller and musician, is a living treasure of the Chinese American community. He has been at the forefront of Asian American artistic expression since 1970. Charlie recently appeared in the 3 part series American Artifacts: the Chinese in America on CSPAN3. His website is: www.chinastorytelling.com.

Charlie created and performs this monologue of a true Chinese American hero, a story that represents the spirit of the Chinese who helped build the Transcontinental Railroad in America.

Chin Lin Sou worked as the foreman and contractor of Chinese railroad workers, many of whom Chin, himself, recruited and helped to gain passage into the United States. He was remarkable in that he was very tall, learned to speak fluent English, and later went on to Denver, Colorado, where he became a highly respected business leader.

The cover image is the stained glass portrait honoring Chin Lin Sou, installed in the old Supreme Court room in the Colorado State Capitol.
